

User Manual for Practitioner's Return to Work Report (PRTW)

Return to work (RTW) is a documented plan/strategy to accommodate an injured worker with temporary restrictions while receiving treatment or rehabilitation.

The return-to-work plan is a collaboration between the worker, the employer, the care provider and the WCB. The return to work will be monitored and progressed by the care providers based on objective clinical findings. It should have a defined start and end point that may include a combination of a gradual increase in hours of work and/or work activities designed to return the injured worker to the pre-injury job.

It is expected that the majority of RTW programs will be less than four weeks in duration, unless there are unusual circumstances such as unusual shift length, heavy to very heavy industrial DOT, a highly repetitive job or a post-surgical worker.

A RTW Plan should include:

- The week it should start, the total hours of work, the days, and a list of restrictions to job duties; and
- Any comments or concerns regarding job duties in the comments section.

A RTW may exceed four weeks on occasion. After the four weeks have been completed, the practitioner should:

- Submit the remainder of the RTW for the final stages;
- If a graduated RTW of greater than 4 weeks is required, provide a rationale in the restrictions section below; and
- Provide an anticipated end date. When a RTW plan exceeds 4 weeks, please indicate the actual week when the worker can be expected to return to work, i.e., week 5, 6, 7. This is particularly important when the return to work is exceeding 4 weeks because the worker's case manager uses this information for payment of wage loss.
